

Sale Name: Auction on PINE LAKE
LOT 160 - Axes, Machete, Maul etc.

Description

Double sided axes, one still attached to handle, no cracks or splinters, the other, a different story. Someone chopped down 17 cherry trees in a row until this axe head finally split right off the handle (That's a joke). Not to worry though, with a little TLC, this guy can be up and chopping in no time. Also have a hatchet, with a wide knob at the base of the handle for maximum ergonomics, this thing ain't slipping out of nobody's hands. And best of all, made in the US of A, so bonus points there. This Maul is a beast, doesn't have a weight on the head, but with its dura coated head and fiberglass handle, it can handle just about anything. The machete, i mean, not much i need to say about it. Everyone needs one, nobody knows why or what to use it for, but if you don't own one already, buy this one. It's a game changer. At the very least you can keep it by your bed at night and it might make those monsters under the bed think twice about messing with you.
